

KITTYHAWK

Welcome to KITTYHAWK

Open up a time capsule of history.

Having taken our name after the iconic WWII fighter jet and inspired by the end-of-war celebrations held after the Liberation of Paris, we welcome you to Kittyhawk.

In this menu, we will guide you on a journey through history - a cocktail list dedicated to narrating the stories, feats, accomplishments and people of WWII

Presented under the themes of Liberty, Engineering, Innovation and Decorated, we've curated a menu that aims to be both explored and enjoyed.

For every libation, there is a story to be uncovered, a moment to be honoured and an experience to be savoured. We look forward to raising a glass with you!

LIBERTY

Edward Malindine, Captain of AFPU #5, took one of the most famous photos of WW2, perfectly encapsulating the moment of freedom, frivolity and peace that the people of France enjoyed.

ENGINEERING

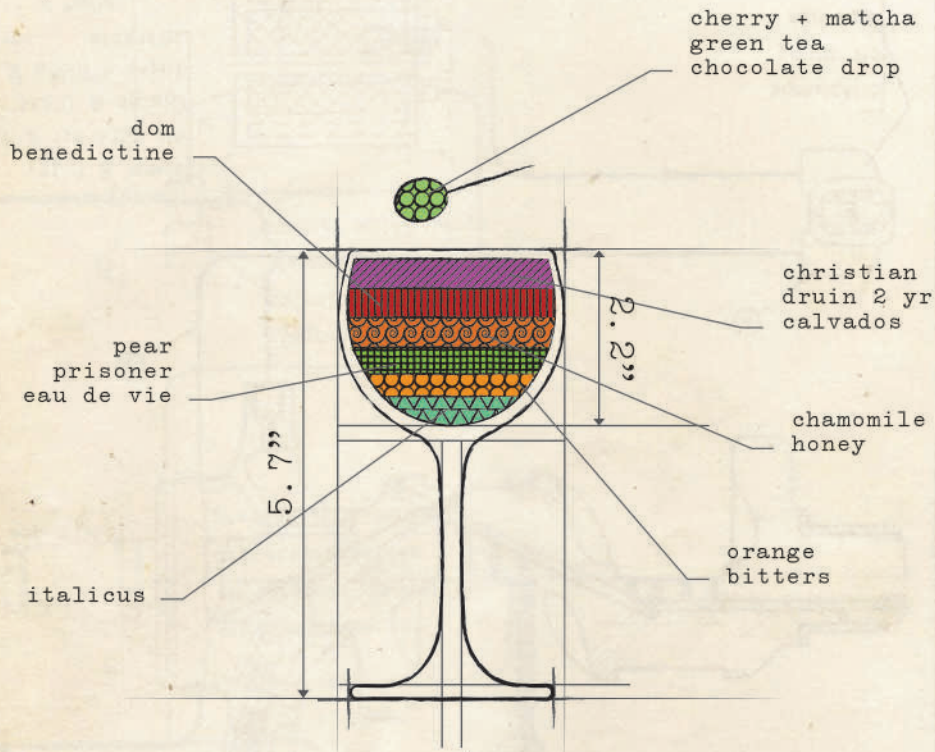

The Curtiss P-40 Warhawk is unmistakably one of the most iconic symbols of WWII and American aviation.

Invented in 1935 by Donovan Berlin, the Warhawk saw extensive use during WWII, accelerating aviation engineering and research by decades.

Precise, technical and bold are but a few words to describe these aircraft, designed to be agile and highly maneuverable in the skies.

INNOVATION

Abraham Wald, a Jewish-Hungarian mathematician, is best known for his work on statistical bias during WWII. After collecting data on returning planes, instead of reinforcing where the bullet holes were, he advised the American military to reinforce where they weren't.

Innovative and out-of-the-box thinking drove America's success in WWII, changing the way we think about strategies and exploring even the most peculiar of ideas.
